ABOUT ME

An adventurer who decided to hitchhike around the world 🤝👍

A little trip to Sardinia on a scooter, sleeping in the best places on the island, in a tent :)

What am I?

Hello, I'm Ronan, I love the sea and traveling! I've always thought about doing a big trip after my studies. My engineering degree in 2021 was the perfect transition to travel... But I didn't count on the COVID-19, which closed all borders at that time. So I decided to postpone my trip until 2024 by completing a doctorate in applied mathematics. Now I'm a doctor in applied mathematics on beach sediment dynamics. All I have to do now is prepare for my trip and get out of here! Here's hoping that monkeypox doesn't create a new global pandemic...

When I was growing up, I was lucky enough to have parents who loved to travel! Many of our trips were very important to me, and helped shape the individual I am today. But the most memorable experience for me was living in Japan from the age of 3 to 6. Despite my young age, I was both overwhelmed and amazed by this culture shock. Japan will remain in my heart forever, and I hope to go back there one day!

My last few years have helped me build my project. Indeed, spending days in an office can sometimes make you want to escape. Although my 8 years as a beach lifeguard allowed me to discover an exciting and above all outdoor profession, with a touch of adventure on each of our interventions, they also awakened in me a desire to go further in the adventure. My weekends, my crossings of France and my hitchhiking trips have awakened in me a desire to discover the world by hitchhiking. It's become essential to show that travel is not just about taking a plane ticket for 3 weeks and going back to the routine of work.

For me, this trip is a way of becoming an ambassador for hitchhiking and new travel, in the context of the ecological crisis.

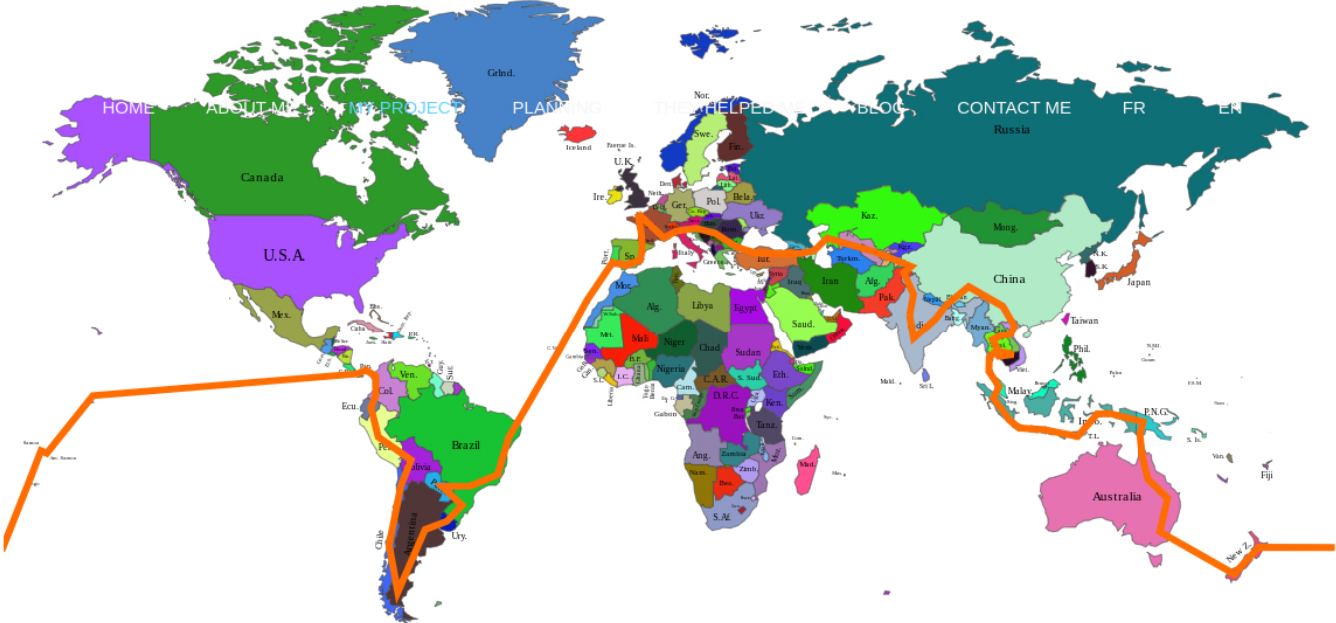

MY PROJECT

Hitchhiking around the world!

Description of my Itinerary

There are two possible routes for this itinerary. The first possibility is to reach America from France at the start of the adventure. This would make it "easy" to find the first ocean crossing, while remaining in a French-speaking environment. The second possibility would be to head directly for Asia, via the Caspian Sea to avoid the political situation in Iran and Russia (but the border seems to be closed at the moment...). This would put me directly in the auto-stop environment, but I'd need to find two ocean crossings by boat-hitchhiking from a foreign country.

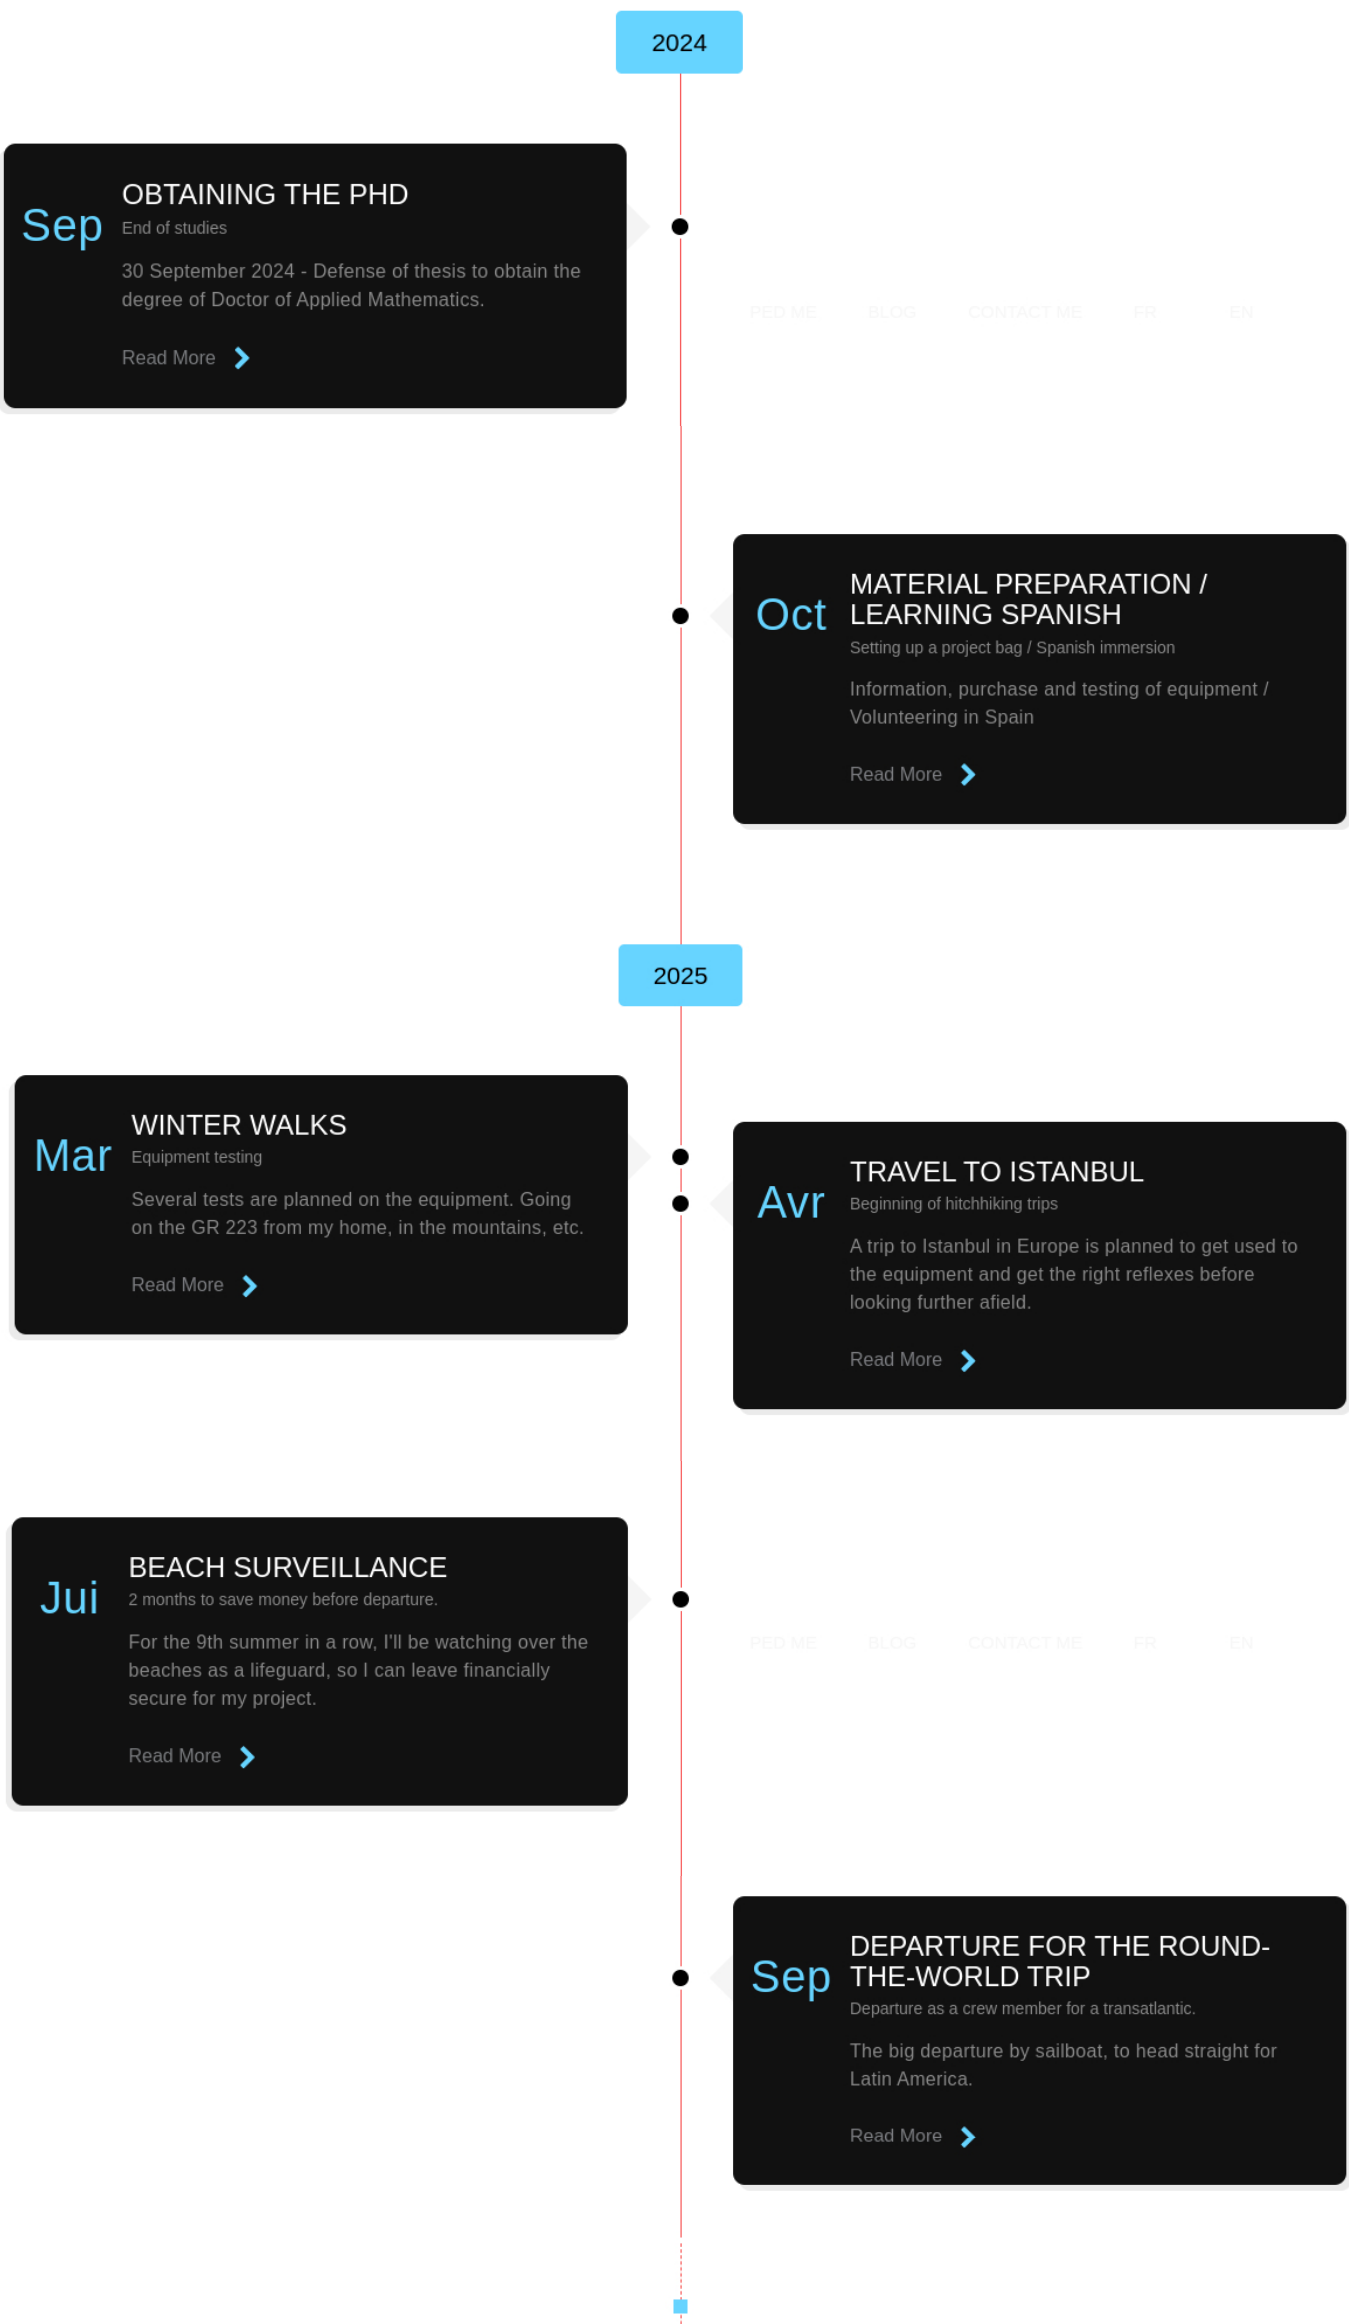

The ideal solution is to hitchhike directly from France to Latin America. Then visit the continent by hitchhiking. That's why I started learning Spanish 🇪🇸🇵🇷

PROVISIONAL SCHEDULE

Before setting off on a round-the-world trip, it's important for me to be able to test and adjust my equipment so as not to leave with a bag that's too big and bulky. For a trip lasting several years, I'm going to have to be as minimalist as possible so as not to endure this journey. The schedule below is designed to help me set off as serenely as possible, whether in terms of cultural aspects (languages), equipment or even navigation skills.
